1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

[illegible]The image is a high-contrast, black and white photograph of a document page. It features a prominent grid pattern, which appears to be a film strip or a document page with a grid overlay. The grid consists of numerous small, dark rectangular cells arranged in rows and columns. The overall appearance is grainy and textured, with a high level of contrast between the dark grid lines and the lighter background. The grid covers most of the page, with some areas appearing slightly more blurred or out of focus than others. The lighting is uneven, with some areas being brighter than others, creating a sense of depth and texture. The overall effect is one of a heavily processed or scanned image, possibly from a microfilm or a high-contrast photocopy.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

[illegible]The image is a high-contrast, black and white scan of a textured surface, likely a book cover or endpaper. It features a prominent grid-like pattern created by vertical and horizontal lines, which divide the surface into a series of rectangular sections. The texture is grainy and noisy, with varying shades of gray and black, suggesting a material like paper or fabric. The overall appearance is abstract and somewhat chaotic due to the high contrast and noise.
